Future-Ready Infrastructure | Adapting to Technology Change and Geopolitical Risk

The infrastructure and energy sectors are navigating rapidly evolving geopolitical dynamics and growing demand for future-ready assets. The industry is responding with practical solutions to accelerate decarbonisation and digitalisation and help address growing social inequalities.

In 2027, IPFA's global programme will explore how changing global and regional conditions are influencing investment priorities and driving innovation in project development and operations.

But delivering this transformation will also require investment in people. We are committed to helping our members attract, develop, and retain the talent needed to build the workforce of the future.

As an IPFA member, you are connected to a global network of over 600 organisations and 20,000+ professionals, a vibrant community that offers exclusive insights, collaboration opportunities, and a platform to help shape the industry's future.

We always welcome feedback on your membership experience so please do get in touch.
